So there are 5 problems, the first is grammar, the second is pronunciation, the third is the use of wrong metaphors, the fourth is errors in word emphasis (emphasis is pronounced em-FE-sis, it should be EM-fe-sis), the fifth is poor vocabulary so that's all the words.

It's most complicated if you don't have a vocabulary because others can basically speak just fine, while those without a vocabulary are limited by their vocabulary, which can also lead to miscommunication in real life.

Learning English is so that you can communicate with people from other countries, right? It's useless if you learn English incorrectly, you'll get a lot of misunderstandings
