In the United States, the infant mortality rate is 7.0 (seven deaths for every thousand babies under the age of one). Though this is lower than the mortality rate in many developing countries (which range up to 287.5 in Angola), it is higher than in all other developed countries. It is higher even than the rate in some developing countries, such as Cuba or Singapore (with the lowest rate of 2.29). Sleep: An Important Part of Life

1. Are you sometimes a little tired and sleepy in the early afternoon? If so, you are not the only one. Many people feel this way after lunch. They may think that eating lunch is the cause of their sleepiness. Or, in summer, they may think it is the heat. However, the real reason lies inside their bodies. At that time - about eight hours after you wake up, your body temperature goes down. This is what makes you slow down and feel sleepy. Scientists have tested sleep habits in experimental situations where there was no night or day. The people in these experiments almost always followed a similar sleeping pattern. They slept for one long period and then for one short period about eight hours later.

The Topics: Reason why people getin sleepy in the afternoon / Sleep

The Topic sentences: The real reason lies inside their bodies

The Supporting detail(s) are: About eight ... , your body temperature goes down

2. In many parts of the world, people take naps in the middle of the day. (A nap is a short, daytime period of sleep.) This is especially the case in warmer climates, where the heat makes work difficult in early afternoon. Researchers are now saying that naps are good for everyone in any climate. First of all, a daily nap means a more rested body and mind and many health benefits. In countries where naps are traditional, people tend to suffer less from stress and stress-related problems such as heart disease. Another benefit of taking naps is improved job performance. In jobs where public safety is involved, a nap can make an important difference. Studies have found, for example, that airplane pilots make fewer mistakes if they take regular naps.

3. Many working people, unfortunately, have no time to take naps. Though doctors may recommend taking naps, employers do not allow it! If you do have the possibility, however, here are a few tips about making the most of your nap. Remember that the best time to take a nap is about eight hours after you get up. A nap too late in the day may only make you feel more tired and sleepy afterward. This can also happen if you sleep for too long. A nap that lasts too long may also make it difficult for you to sleep at night. If time is a problem, try a short nap even ten minutes of sleep can be helpful. Some people, in fact, find that they do not need to sleep at all. They feel rested and more awake after just lying down for a while.

F. Read the following passage. (1) Choose the main idea of each paragraph, and (2) match 5 words from the passage to their meaning. (10 points)

Controlling Water in the Netherlands

The Netherlands, in Europe, is more than 60 percent near or below sea level. Flooding has always been a major worry because its major cities, factories, and greenhouse farms are built on (1)floodplains – an area near river that is often flooded. The workers' journey from work to home, for example, is also often (2)diverted to a new route because of this flooding. The greatest risk of flooding comes from the North Sea itself with its severe winter storms and massive tides. However, flooding can also occur along the Rhine, Maas, and Scheldt Rivers, which are swollen every spring with snowmelt from the Alps. And when these major rivers meet the North Sea, they form a delta region that consists of additional floodplains.

Main idea:

a. The Netherlands, in Europe, is more than 60 percent near or below sea level.
b. Floods in the Netherlands are caused by severe winter storms.
c. The Netherlands is at a high risk of flooding because much of it is on floodplains.

2. As the Dutch built their cities, farms, and factories on the floodplains, they also built a system of (3)barriers to keep the floodwaters. The Dutch barriers are the strongest in the world, designed to protect the country from the usual high tides and heavy rainfall, as well as possible (4)monster storms that occur only rarely. The first line of defense is the dikes, dams, and storm barriers, which over the centuries have become ever longer and higher. Today they stretch for about 2,200 miles (3,500 km) along the sea and the major rivers. They are aided by secondary defenses, such as canal dikes and holding ponds, as well as by thousands of water pumps and pumping stations.

Main idea:

a. The Dutch built cities, farms, and factories on the floodplains.
b. The Dutch built a system of barriers to keep water out of the floodplains.
c. The Dutch system of barriers is the strongest in the world.

3. A recent government study on the effects of climate change has led the Dutch government to change i traditional water protection strategies. The study concluded that the combination of higher rainfall in Northern Europe and rising sea levels would lead to an increased risk of flooding. At the same time, hot summers could lead to cracking and weakening in the traditional earthen dikes. Thus, in the future, it m no longer be possible to hold back the water. Though it will continue to maintain the barriers, the government is shifting to a (5)softer, more environmentally friendly approach. The aim is to rely more the natural protection of flood plains, sand dunes, salt marshes, and mud flats. The government has beg buying land along major waterways, where water could be directed when floods threaten.

Main idea:

a. The Dutch government has been studying the effects of climate change.
b. As a result of climate change, the Dutch will change their water protection strategies.
c. More rainfall in Northern Europe and rising sea levels may increase the risk of flooding.

Refer to the above passage about "Controlling Water in The Netherlands". Match the five words with their meaning. Write the letter (a, b, c, etc.) next to the word in the column "Your Answer". There are three options of word meaning you will not use. (10 points)
